Support and Technical Service

For general information about the technique and for more information regarding our products you are welcome to contact us or our distributor in your area.

We have a skilled staff available to solve your technical problems if an equipment oriented problem should arise.

Obtain a return authorization number from either your local CMA Representative or CMA Service before you return any products for repair.

A detailed description will help minimize cost and turnaround time.

Visit www.microdialysis.com for the latest technical support and service information.

Application Notes and Training Course

APPLICATION NOTES IN BASIC RESEARCH

A number of applications in basic research are presented as notes and abstracts. They can be ordered at our website or you can print PDF files directly from the web.

MICRODIALYSIS TRAINING COURSES

Two-day intensive, introductory courses on Microdialysis are organized for those who are about to start or have just started using the technique.

The course program includes both lectures on Microdialysis and practical demonstrations. Participants will gain a general overview of the Microdialysis technique, its advantages and limitations. In practical classes they will learn to conduct their own experiments under the leadership of highly qualified instructors.

This is also an excellent opportunity for open discussions and an exchange of ideas while meeting with other scientists and experts in the field.
